

ABSTRACT

An electrical connector (1) includes an insulative housing (10) defining a first and a second mating ports (140, 125) at opposite sides thereof, a number of contacts (20) received in the insulative housing and each having a first contact portion (22) exposed into the first mating port and a second contact portion (25) exposed into the second mating port, and a shield member (30) attached to the insulative housing.